The Natural Products Society of the Philippines (NPSP) was founded in 1996 to bring together researchers who are actively involved in the study of the chemistry, biology, and sustainable use of natural products.

With the theme "Natural Products in Agriculture, Biodiversity, Conservation and Bio-enterprise," the 23rd NPSP convention shall focus on the utilization of natural products in agriculture, the diversity of natural bioactive constituents, the importance of conserving these resources, and the scientific evidences for their effective commercial utilization.

The 23rd NPSP Convention at the Mariano Marcos State University allows greater opportunity for the researchers and students in the region to attend the scientific sessions and interact with other researchers engaged in natural products.
